VANCE-GRANVILLE
 COMMUNITY COLLEGE

2006-2007 PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Community + College:

Harnessing the Power of Partnerships

The past year was truly the year of partnerships for Vance-Granville Community College. One of the college's strategic initiatives, set by the Board of Trustees, is to "develop and maintain community partnerships that support the college's mission." If Vance-Granville is going to live up to its name as a community college, it must be a partner and seek ways to collaborate with others for the benefit both of our students and of our service area.

Partnerships come in many forms. We partner with other educational institutions, including our local K-12 school systems, Kittrell Job Corps Center and four-year universities like North Carolina Central University, in order to create an educated society. We partner with the Masonic Home for Children in Oxford and hospitals such as Maria Parham Medical Center so that our Culinary Technology and Health Sciences students, respectively, have the best environments in which to learn. We partner with businesses in our community on a regular basis, both to create and adapt programs to suit their needs, and to support students in the form of endowed scholarships. Many businesses, agencies and churches partner with VGCC to allow us to hold classes, which reflects our commitment to be accessible to the communities we serve. Chambers of commerce partner with us in a variety of ways, including cooperating to put on EXPO each fall. We play a part in partnerships like the Kerr-Tar Hub that promote the economic vitality of our region.

We also developed partnerships last year that are coming to fruition in the current fiscal year, including a training consortium agreement with the North Carolina Department of Correction, as well as alliances with Edgecombe Community College to offer the CT/MRI program, and with Lenoir Community College to offer the Global Logistics Technology program.

In 1943, Winston Churchill said, "If we are together, nothing is impossible. If we are divided, all will fail." He was talking about the partnership between the U.S. and Great Britain during World War II. Although the partnerships in which VGCC engages do not have quite the same scope as that history-changing alliance, they matter just as much to the future nurses, law enforcement officers, chefs, teachers and entrepreneurs who come to our college for their opportunity for success. It is with them in mind that, on behalf of the VGCC faculty and staff, I present this report on our 2006-2007 year.

Randy Parker,
VGCC President

"On behalf of the VGCC Board of Trustees, I want to express appreciation to President Parker and to all our faculty, staff and students for their outstanding efforts over the past year. My fellow trustees and I have continued to be impressed with the college's many successful community partnerships, some of which are detailed in this report.

In addition to new and evolving collaborative efforts, we have seen a variety of changes this year -- significant progress in construction, technological advances, new ideas and new scholarships. Some things have not changed, however, such as the college's commitment to student success and the board's commitment to continued growth and improvement.

In many ways, the 2006-2007 year will be hard to beat. After all, it was toward the end of this year that we learned that VGCC had earned a Superior rating from the state and a perfect score by meeting or exceeding all 12 of the state's performance standards. Even with all our achievements this year, however, the trustees are confident that VGCC's best years are still to come."

Donald C. Seifert, Sr.
VGCC Board Chairman

Highlights of 2006-2007

Congressmen Visit

U.S. Representative G. K. Butterfield (seen at right with President Parker) visited the college's main campus on Feb. 20, 2007. Butterfield met with college officials and spoke in the college's Civic Center to a group of students, faculty and staff. He discussed a wide range of issues that he has dealt with in his nearly three years in Congress, including the federal budget deficit. Butterfield praised VGCC as a leading educational institution in the state.

U.S. Representative Brad Miller paid a visit to VGCC's South Campus on June 4, 2007. He spoke with a group of VGCC faculty, staff and trustees, including Board of Trustees chair Donald C. Seifert, Sr. and vice-chair David Brooks.

VGCC President Randy Parker welcomed Miller and discussed some of the college's programs and projects, including efforts in the areas of biotechnology, allied health, culinary technology, global education, public safety training and prison education.

Granville County Economic Development Director Leon Turner was also on hand, and he praised the community college's role in attracting and retaining businesses and in employee training. In the photo above, Rep. Miller (left) visits the new Radiography lab at South Campus during a tour conducted by Parker (right) and South Campus assistant director Jason Snelling.

Early Childhood Achievements

In 2007, both of the college's child day care centers were awarded five-star licenses, the highest possible ratings given by the state of North Carolina. The day care on Main Campus received its rating in February, and the center at Franklin County Campus followed in June. Both facilities

provide outstanding care to children of students, faculty and staff, and also serve as excellent learning environments for students in Vance-Granville's Early Childhood Associate program.

In February 2007, the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC) awarded accreditation to the college's Early Childhood Associate program, one of twelve associate degree programs to earn the distinction this year. Vance-Granville is one of just 17 programs across the country to ever receive accreditation through NAEYC's Early Childhood Associate Degree Accreditation program.

Northern Ireland Visitors

VGCC hosted a five-person delegation from Northern Ireland's government at the college's main campus in June 2007. Led by Northern Ireland's Employment and Learning Minister, Sir Reg Empey (third from left), the group was conducting a fact-finding mission on education and workforce development in North Carolina as part of a week-long visit to North America. President Parker led the visitors on a tour that included the Automotive Systems program, the Biotechnology lab and the VNet room in Building 7.

Award Winning Faculty & Staff

In 2006, President Randy Parker presented his third annual Presidential Excellence in Leadership Awards to Dr. John Beck, VGCC Dean of Arts and Sciences, and to the four faculty members who formed the Global Studies program: Science instructor Phyllis "Button" Brady, Science Program head/instructor Steve McGrady, Psychology Program head/instructor Lydia Powell and Spanish instructor Margaret Chaves-Smith.

Dr. John Beck worked at VGCC full-time overseeing the college transfer program from 1987 until retiring in 2007. Earning his bachelor's degree in world history from the University of South Carolina, his master's and doctoral U.S. history degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Beck taught history courses and Southern Culture at VGCC in addition to his administrative duties. "Through Dr. Beck's leadership, VGCC is now recognized as one of the state's top college transfer programs," President Parker said.

The four instructors presented with Presidential Excellence in Leadership awards led eleven students on a twenty-five-day educational trip to Costa Rica in 2006. More than one year before the trip, they initiated the Global Studies program, with the intention of leading a study abroad.

A full-time VGCC science instructor since 1992, Button Brady graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a bachelor's degree in zoology and psychology, and from Central Washington University with a master's in biology. She was honored as VGCC's Instructor of the Year in 1998.

Steve McGrady has been a full-time VGCC instructor since 1990 and Program Head for Science since 1992. He is a graduate of Wake Forest University, where he earned a bachelor's degree, and of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he earned his master's in biology. McGrady teaches courses in biology, chemistry and geology. He received VGCC's Excellence in Teaching award in 1992.

Lydia Powell has been a full-time VGCC instructor for the past 24 years. She earned bachelor's degrees in psychology and education from Wake Forest University, and a master's in Clinical Psychology from North Carolina Central University. Powell taught in VGCC's education program and headed that program before becoming a psychology instructor.

A full-time Spanish instructor at VGCC since 2000, Margaret Chaves-Smith is a graduate of the University of Costa Rica. Chaves-Smith first came to the United States as part of the Visiting International Faculty Program in 1994. She taught at North Elementary School in Caswell County and Beaufort Academy in South Carolina before coming to VGCC. She earned a master's degree in the teaching of languages from the University of Southern Mississippi.

Tom Edwards was VGCC's Instructor of the Year in 2006. Edwards has been an instructor since August 1999. In addition to Office Systems Technology, he teaches courses in the departments of Computer Information Technology and Web Technologies, including some online courses. A graduate of Southern Vance High School, he obtained two degrees from VGCC and earned a bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro in 1999.

Lisa Evans was named VGCC's Staff Member of the Year in 2006. Evans worked full-time for VGCC from 1991-2006 as Controller for the college. Evans, a graduate of North Carolina State University, served on four different college committees. Through innovation and efficient use of resources, Evans kept Business Office staffing needs to a minimum, while enrollment and the number of employees increased.

VGCC Economic Development

Vance-Granville plays a vital role in the economic development of the four-county area as the primary center for training the workforce, as a helping hand to small businesses, and as a partner with other organizations leading economic development efforts. The college is represented in the Henderson-Vance Economic Partnership, on the Henderson-Vance Chamber of Commerce board of directors, and as a partner in the Kerr-Tar Hub, a regional project with an industrial/business park situated on 1,000 acres, adjacent to VGCC's main campus.

In addition to the opportunities for instruction offered, VGCC offers specific programs tailored to provide assistance to local businesses and government agencies. An example of this type of service is an agreement developed in 2007 to serve the employee training needs of North Carolina Department of Correction employees in the college's service area.

Another VGCC service, Focused Industry Training (FIT), is designed for specific groups of workers who need additional skills and also for workers who need to update their skills because of technological changes. Training is developed jointly by the college and the participating industry.

VGCC's Division of Industry Services stands ready to provide training classes for all businesses in the college's service area. Classes can be held at one of the VGCC campuses or on-site for requesting companies.

VGCC also promotes economic health through Occupational Extension classes, which build job skills and increase career opportunities for area residents.

In 2006-2007, approximately 30,000 people from outside the college attended activities in the Civic Center, and over 7,000 used other college facilities.

In October 2006, the VGCC Civic Center was home to the 17th annual EXPO. About 900 people browsed through booths set up by 73 vendors.

GLOBAL TRAVEL

Two VGCC instructors studied abroad in 2007.

Marian C. Dillahunt-Andrews (shown, at right), a Developmental English and Reading instructor, spent part of her summer vacation in India, but she was actually still at work, representing the college and learning about education in a foreign land.

Dillahunt-Andrews was selected by VGCC's Global Awareness Committee as a World View delegate. World View, an international program for educators based at UNC-Chapel Hill, partners with public and private K-12 schools, community colleges and universities throughout the state to help educators and students succeed in an increasingly interconnected world.

Dillahunt-Andrews and her fellow World View participants learned more about the educational system and the diverse cultural and religious practices in India by visiting schools, cultural attractions, and historical sites in the cities of New Delhi (India's capital), Old Delhi, Jaipur, Agra (home of the Taj Mahal), Varanasi and Khajuraho over 12 days.

"My visit to India has allowed me to think globally and will afford my students the opportunity to think 'outside the box' and of their place within the global society," Dillahunt-Andrews said. She added that the 21st-century economy demands "an internationally competent workforce."

Also in 2007, Spanish instructor Matthew Nielsen received a fellowship from the Community College Humanities Association to attend a month-long institute in Oaxaca, Mexico.

The institute, entitled "Oaxaca: Crossroads of a Continent," provided participants with an in-depth study of the history and culture of Oaxaca, a mountainous state in southern Mexico, with a focus on the indigenous cultures of the Zapotec and Mixtec peoples.

Twenty-four faculty selected from community colleges, four-year colleges and universities throughout the United States studied Zapotec and Mixtec cultures in the field with nine internationally-known scholars and writers from a variety of humanities and social sciences disciplines.

"Overall, the program was outstanding," Nielsen said. "I was able to study archaeology, anthropology, history, art, and all of the humanities in general. Also, as a Spanish speaker/instructor who had never been to an area of Mexico with large indigenous populations, the opportunity for immersion in this new Spanish-speaking population was exciting."

CONSTRUCTION and GROWTH

A 20,000-square foot building at South Campus was dedicated in April 2007.

2006-07 was an historic year in which Vance-Granville Community College brought to a close an active program of construction and renovation that has included facilities on all four of the college's campuses.

The dedication of an addition to South Campus on April 19, 2007 marked the end of the last project funded by $17.1 million from the Higher Education Facilities bonds approved by voters in 2000. Donald C. Seifert, Sr., the chair of the college Board of Trustees, called the dedication ceremony a "red-letter day in the 25-year history of the South Campus."

Since 1982, South Campus — the college's first satellite campus — has expanded from a portion of a warehouse to an attractive permanent home between Butner and Creedmoor.

The 20,000 square feet of new space, constructed from late 2005 through late 2006, includes seven general classrooms, five computer labs, faculty offices, a conference room, and a new Radiography classroom and lab.

The Radiography program, which is taught at South Campus, now has a lab fully equipped to teach students how to perform X-ray procedures.

The Human Services Technology program also moved into the addition. Another new room is an Information Highway, or "VNet," classroom, one of which is now in place at each of Vance-Granville's four campuses. The VNet classrooms allow the college to offer a class on one campus and beam it to other campuses simultaneously.

As part of the construction project, areas of the existing building were also renovated. Among the features of the renovation are an expanded library, which is shared by the college and Granville County, in addition to more room for Basic Skills and Adult High School programs.

The year also saw the completion of the new 3,100-square-foot laboratory for Bioprocess Technology in the lower level of Building 8 on the main campus. This state-of-the-art facility includes a classroom and lab with gowning and cleaning stations, a prep room and storage room. Grants from the NC Bionetwork helped pay for video-conferencing equipment, a fermenter with controls, autoclave, incubator, centrifuges and DNA and protein gel electrophoresis equipment.

Radiography students work in the lab at South Campus.

Bioprocess Technology students work in the new 3,100-square-foot laboratory located on Main Campus.

Maria Parham Medical Center

Masonic Home For Children

N.C. Central University

Maria Parham Medical Center

A partnership between VGCC and Maria Parham Medical Center in Henderson resulted in the establishment of a state-of-the-art Allied Health Science Simulation Center at the hospital, significantly enhancing the college's Health Sciences programs, while also potentially improving the overall health of our region. New high-tech simulation equipment allows VGCC students to learn in a safe environment that offers realistic situations without real patients. The public-private collaboration will lead to fewer medical errors and more highly-trained health care professionals.

VGCC Health Consortium

Maria Parham Medical Center, Granville Medical Center, Franklin Regional Medical Center, Person Memorial Hospital and Community Memorial Health Center of South Hill, Virginia partnered with the college to form the Vance-Granville Community College Health Consortium in 2007. The purpose of the consortium is to enhance the advancement of health occupations by developing relationships, sharing energies, and fostering the collaboration of resources between healthcare providers throughout the region.

North Carolina Central University

In December, leaders from North Carolina Central University (NCCU) and VGCC met to sign new articulation agreements and to discuss how to boost enrollment of African American males in higher education, especially in VGCC's programs. VGCC President Randy Parker and Dr. Beverly Washington Jones (pictured), NCCU's provost and vice chancellor for Academic Affairs, signed two agreements in the Biotechnology lab on Main Campus. The new articulation agreements allow students to more quickly and conveniently finish degrees through VGCC and NCCU that prepare them for careers in nursing and in the biotechnology field.

Masonic Home for Children

A public-private partnership with The Masonic Home for Children at Oxford came to fruition in 2006-2007 during the inaugural year of VGCC's Culinary Technology program, which uses the home's cafeteria facilities. Graduates of the two-year Culinary program will earn an Associate in Applied Science degree and will be trained for work in restaurants, hotels, catering operations, health care facilities, school food service and other food service operations. President Randy Parker said the Culinary Technology program fits very well with the college's educational philosophy.

Professional Engineers of NC

VGCC hosted the regional MathCounts competition for the North Central Chapter of North Carolina on Feb. 17, 2007. MathCounts is a national math enrichment, coaching and competition program that promotes middle school mathematics achievement. Members of the National Society of Professional Engineers, such as VGCC President Randy Parker, provide support and leadership for competitions at the local and state levels. The competition was co-sponsored locally by Vance-Granville, Piedmont Community College, the Professional Engineers of North Carolina, Carolina Sunrock LLC, Embarq, Novozymes, Glen Raven, Inc., Progress Energy, Revlon and the Granville County Economic Development Commission. Sixty-one students represented ten different schools from the area. First place went to G.C. Hawley Middle School in Creedmoor, which also provided the top individual student competitor, or “mathlete,” Christian Willis (pictured with President Parker).

World View

VGCC partners with World View, an international program for educators based at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The World View program works with public and private K-12 schools, community colleges and universities throughout the state to help prepare students to succeed in an increasingly inter-connected world. In addition to sponsoring symposia, seminars and workshops, World View takes 30 educators abroad each June for a two-week study visit. The purpose is to widen educators’ lenses, deepen their appreciation of cultural dynamics, and expand their comfort level in cross-cultural settings. In 2007, VGCC instructor Marian Dillahunt-Andrews was one of those 30 educators (see page 8).

Warren County Schools

In 2007, VGCC’s collaboration with Warren County Schools took a new form when the Warren County Campus in Warrenton became the home of a new high school. The Warren County Schools system began leasing space on campus to conduct classes for its Warren New Tech High School during the 2007-2008 year. Students at the innovative new school are involved in project-based and problem-based learning.

Edgecombe Community College

The Computed Tomography and Magnetic Resonance Imaging (CT/MRI) Technology curriculum, a specialty for radiographers, will be available to VGCC students as a result of a partnership with other community colleges, led by Edgecombe Community College. VGCC, ECC, Johnston Community College and Fayetteville Technical Community College work together as the Eastern North Carolina Consortium of Computed Tomography and Magnetic Resonance Imaging. CT and MRI technologists use innovative technologies to create diagnostic images.

Lenoir Community College

VGCC developed a partnership with Lenoir Community College to offer the Global Logistics Technology program to students, starting in the fall 2007 semester. The GLT program will prepare individuals for a multitude of careers in distribution, transportation and manufacturing. Students will take all general education classes on VGCC campuses. Major courses will be offered by LCC via the Internet.

Federal Bureau of Prisons

On March 6, 2007, VGCC received the 2007 national award for education at the Defendant/Offender Workforce Development Conference. Over the last two years, VGCC has developed a distance education model for instructional delivery to inmates that is a first in American correctional education, according to Senior Warden Art Beeler at the Federal Correctional Complex in Butner. VGCC was recognized for using the Blackboard Learning Management System to provide online classes for inmates and using the VNet - VGCC’s two-way interactive classrooms. VGCC partners not only with the federal prisons at Butner, but also with state prisons in the four-county area.

STUDENT

Academic Excellence

Each year, the North Carolina Community College System honors students from each of the state's 58 colleges with Academic Excellence Awards. Award recipients from VGCC in 2007 were Tabitha H. Osborne of Franklinton, an Early Childhood / Teacher Associate major, and Joan D. Ayscue of Henderson, who graduated in May 2007 with a Recreation and Leisure Studies degree.

Student Leadership Institute/J'Maine Richardson

Recreation and Leisure Studies student J'Maine Richardson of Henderson was one of just 28 accepted into the North Carolina Community College Student Leadership Institute (SLI) in 2007. He followed in the footsteps of Joan Ayscue, who graduated from SLI in 2007, and then went on to serve on the SLI board of directors. The SLI was founded to enhance the leadership quality of student participants and to better prepare them for professional and civic responsibilities.

Dana Allen

Dana N. Allen of Creedmoor was selected for a summer internship with the Tourism, Film and Sports Development division of the state Department of Commerce. She was the only community college student in North Carolina selected in 2007 for one of approximately 100 summer opportunities in the State Government Internship Program.

April Culbreth

In October 2006, VGCC Nursing graduate April Culbreth of Stem was honored by Gov. Mike Easley with the Governor's Award for Excellence in Workforce Development, as one of two Outstanding Adult Participants. At a ceremony in Greensboro, Culbreth received her award plaque from NC Commission on Workforce Development chair Chris Rolfe and a cash gift from Duke Power Company.

Male Mentoring Program

2006-2007 was the first year for VGCC's Male Mentoring Program, or M2P. M2P is designed to assist first-year ethnically diverse students in acquiring the confidence, resources and skills needed

Paul Giddings

VGCC had many reasons to be proud of Paul Giddings of Henderson in 2006-2007. Giddings, employed by VGCC as a custodian, completed his GED at age 69. Giddings was also selected to be a part of the community college system's new Literacy Ambassador program. Pictured, Dr. Randy Whitfield (left), associate vice president of Academic and Student Services for the NC Community College System, presents a certificate to Paul Giddings of Henderson in recognition of becoming VGCC's first Literacy Ambassador.

John W. Sides

John Sides of Creedmoor graduated from VGCC with four degrees — Accounting, Business Administration, Business Administration/E-Commerce and Computer Information Technology — at the same time on May 17, 2007, with a 4.0 grade point average. Sides said his multiple degrees were no accident, but rather fit together to meet his goals. Along the way, Sides was awarded two endowed Vance-Granville scholarships.

2006-07 Ambassadors

VGCC selected a diverse group of twelve outstanding students to represent the college as Ambassadors during the 2006-2007 school year.

ENDOWMENT and

Thanks to various resources and contributions to Vance-Granville Community College's Endowment and Scholarship Fund, financial support is available to many of our students with financial need.

As of June 30, 2007, the college Endowment Fund had 306 endowed scholarships for full-time students, as listed in three categories on the following pages.

One of the largest community college scholarship funds in the state, VGCC's Endowment and Scholarship Fund now exceeds $6 million in assets, including funds in trusts naming the college as beneficiary. Over 5,000 scholarships have been awarded to deserving students through the fund since its reactivation in 1982.

Vance-Granville Community College awards endowed scholarships to full-time students in three levels: Presidential Scholar, Presidential Merit and Academic Achievement. Part-time students also receive scholarships to assist with tuition. Non-endowed corporate and private scholarships are also awarded annually through separate gifts. These scholarships are listed on the following pages.

Glen Raven Inc. of Norlina agreed to create six new endowed scholarships through the VGCC Endowment Fund and to support other college initiatives. Glen Raven is the largest corporate donor in the history of the college's Endowment, having donated more than $260,000. Above, from left, President Randy Parker, Glen Raven site manager Todd Weymss and Jo Anna Jones, the college's Vice President of Institutional Advancement and director of the Endowment Fund, celebrated the agreement at Glen Raven's Norlina site.

VGCC's 23rd annual Endowment Fund Benefit Golf Tournament generated $31,500 from entry fees and from sponsors to help fund scholarships for deserving students. That made the tournament the college's second highest-grossing to date. A total of 164 players on 41 teams played in either the morning or afternoon round on May 15, 2007 at the Henderson Country Club. Players seen above, from left, are Rusty Pace, Scott May, Gerald Fuller and Bobbie Jo May.

VGCC faculty and staff continued their tradition of generosity in 2006 by contributing $30,428 to the Endowment Fund. The drive was led by, from left, EMS coordinator Randy Owen, Criminal Justice program head Angela Gardner, Endowment Fund specialist Kay Currin and Director of Counseling Daniel Alvarado. Many deserving students will be able to pursue their educational goals because of the donations made by VGCC personnel.

Katharine Horner of Durham (shown left, with Endowment specialist Kay Currin, and President Randy Parker, right) made gifts totaling $55,000 to endow two VGCC scholarships. The scholarships, the George Wilson and Pattie Alston Macon/Katharine M. Horner Presidential Scholar award and the Guy Thomas and Lelle Courtney Horner/Guy T. Horner Presidential Scholar award, are named for her grandparents and parents.
